

BATTLE OF WATERLOO

Gained by the English and Prussian Armies, commanded by the DUKE OF WELLINGTON and PRINCE BUCHER, over the French Army commanded by NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE, on the 18th of June 1815.

Distinctive Marks of the respective Troops.

English	Infantry	Red
English	Cavalry	Blue
Prussian	Infantry	Green
Prussian	Cavalry	Yellow
French	Infantry	Blue
French	Cavalry	Red

References to the first Plan, representing the Positions of the respective Armies, from 9 o'clock in the Morning, till 4 in the afternoon.

1. Position of the English Army at 9 o'clock in the morning. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
2. The Prussian Army at 9 o'clock in the morning. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
3. The French Army at 9 o'clock in the morning. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.
4. The English Army at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
5. The Prussian Army at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
6. The French Army at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.
7. The English Army at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
8. The Prussian Army at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
9. The French Army at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.
10. The English Army at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
11. The Prussian Army at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
12. The French Army at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.

References to the second Plan, (annexed Paper) representing the Positions of the respective Armies, from 4 o'clock in the afternoon, till the end of the battle.

1. Position of the English Army at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
2. The Prussian Army at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
3. The French Army at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.
4. The English Army at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
5. The Prussian Army at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
6. The French Army at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.
7. The English Army at 8 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
8. The Prussian Army at 8 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
9. The French Army at 8 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.
10. The English Army at 10 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Picton, the 2nd by General Kempt, and the 3rd by General Cooke, were in the front of the English line, and the 4th by General Somerset, in the rear.
11. The Prussian Army at 10 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General Bülow, the 2nd by General Thielmann, and the 3rd by General von Bülow, were in the front of the Prussian line, and the 4th by General von Bülow, in the rear.
12. The French Army at 10 o'clock in the afternoon. The 1st Corps commanded by General D'Erlon, the 2nd by General Reille, and the 3rd by General Ney, were in the front of the French line, and the 4th by General Ney, in the rear.

Scale 1/25000

Drawn by Robert Cope, 1815

References to the second Plan, (annexed Paper) representing the Positions of the respective Armies from four o'clock in the afternoon, till the end of the Battle.

- A Position of the English Army at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.
 - B The Imperial Guard, driven out on the Plain, occupying the Positions the 1st and 2nd Corps had left to move forward.
 - C Attack of the French Cuirassiers, on the Heights of Mont St. Jean, bravely supported by the English Infantry, who check their Impetuosity.
 - D The whole of the French Cavalry took the Cuirassiers, repeated and violent charges take place throughout the whole of the time during three hours.
 - E At about 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Prussians attack Count Lobau's Corps and direct a perpendicular firing on the right flank of the French Army. General Duhesme is seen slither with the Young Guard and some Batteries.
 - F Four Regiments of the Medium Guard move forward to disengage the Cuirassiers exposed to the raking shape-shot of 4 English Batteries.
 - G The Old Guard forms itself in squares on the Plain.
 - H The four Regiments of the Medium Guard are beat back.
 - I The English Army resumes the Attack charges the Old French Guard, who attempt to raise the Shock, and is beat back.
 - K The French Army endeavours in the confusion, to retreat to Genappe, is pursued and harassed by the English and Prussian troops united.
 - L Meeting of the Duke of Wellington Prince Blucher.
- * Spot whereon His Royal Highness The Prince of Orange was wounded, while heading a column of the Netherlands' Troops.